

The First 20 Years of Forever

Presidential Comments

“ Just knowing that the Conservancy is there, is one of the solaces in my life. ”

- Debi Scoggan

“ I was excited by the strategic planning and initial steps that ultimately produced a very successful and still growing effort to protect the Weber River Basin. In our current drought-stricken times, taking care of our rivers is more important than ever. ”

- Michael O'Malley

“ Not a day passes that I don't read an article about the drought in the West. Building more houses is not the solution. Preserving land is. If we don't preserve the farms and pastures, they will soon be subdivisions.

If we don't attempt to save it, who will? ”

- Kathleen Nichols

“ Twenty years ago, with little fanfare, a small group came to life. A product of ideas first sparked at Leadership Park City, that called itself Conserving Our Open Lands - or COOL, for short.

Since then, COOL, today known as the Summit Land Conservancy, has blossomed to become one of our area's largest and most well-respected nonprofit organizations.

Here's to the Summit Land Conservancy now. And to its next 20. ”

- Fred Vallejo

“ Every land deal has its own challenges. It is gratifying when the funds come together and a land deal gets done. And, of course, it all starts with a willing landowner. ”

- Joe Cronley

And THOUSANDS of INDIVIDUAL DONORS whose gifts SAVE LAND!

20 years is a significant portion of a human life. The people who were toddlers when we started this endeavor are now adults, and while I still feel quite young at heart, the mirror tells me a different story. I like to point out that at least half of my gray hair came from working to save the Osguthorpe Farm on Old Ranch Road -- and it was worth it!!

We've come so far in these 20 years

In April of 2002, the Conservancy accepted its first four easements on about 1,000 acres in Empire Canyon. In 2022, we completed the preservation of 1,050 acres of the former monastery property with our friends at the Ogden Valley Land Trust, thanks to funding from the Natural Resources Conservation Service, private foundations, and individual donors.

Building the organization that can save land like the monastery, the Osguthorpe Farm on Old Ranch Road and Marchant Meadows is the work of many, many hands.

This year, we're celebrating 20 years of working together. 20 years of partnerships, collaborations, and joint efforts with many of you. You've taught us how to be good partners; how to braid together federal programs and individual commitment. You've helped us conquer red-tape and soothe misunderstandings. You've shared your perspectives and your insights. Your generosity inspires and humbles us.

We share your love for mornings in meadows, for the chorus of sandhill cranes at dawn, and stillness of moonlight on snow, your hope for conservation burial when all is finished. We hear and we share your deep concern that we're going to pave it all over.

In the spring of 2022, I sat down with Wes Siddoway. Wes's family has farmed in Summit County for 100 years and in 2015 they put an easement on 73 acres between Peoa and the Rockport Reservoir. Wes said the land isn't actually property. It isn't actually a thing, like a hat or a cupcake. And we don't really own it. We can only steward it while we have the opportunity to do so.

I used to say that the Conservancy is here to speak for the land, because the land can't speak for itself. But I've changed my mind about that. The land speaks in the roar of a flood, in the inferno of wildfire, in the silence of a June frost, and in the riot of wildflowers.

Our extractive culture teaches us scarcity, makes us selfish in our fear that someone else might snag "our" stuff, counsels us to hoard what we have and to distrust others. But that's not what the land says.

Nature shows that survival is not of the fittest, but of the strongest community; Resilience comes from symbiosis; Networks connect us, support us, and bring us joy. We don't live by taking; we live by giving. And even when our hair is gray, when our nests are empty, every day is beautiful.

When we started the Summit Land Conservancy our first motto was Together We Can Make A Difference. In truth, I think that's the only way we are successful. It is together, in context with the land, in respect for our different backgrounds that we come to common ground where we truly understand the abundance all around us.

Our celebration honors all of us: the hundreds of partners and the thousands of individuals who have given of their time, their heritage, their words, their dollars, their love.

Your support saves land and together we HAVE made a difference.
